

Do you want a bigger and stronger engine in a smaller package? You got it!

THE 2009 Nissan's latest Z-car series 370Z has a 3.7-liter V-6 under its hood. This Bigger and Stronger engine, which produces 332 horsepower and 270 lb-ft of torque, will power the new 370Z that is about 90 pounds lighter than its predecessor—a perfect recipe for fun. Icing on the cake are two new transmission options: a six-speed manual with an optional rev-matching feature that automatically blips the throttle on downshifts, and a seven-speed automatic.

Nissan offers the 370Z in two trim levels at launch: base and Touring. Standard features include keyless start, automatic xenon headlights, and stability and traction control. The Touring trim adds a better stereo system, Bluetooth, and leather-trimmed sport seats, among other features. The only options are a navigation system with iPod connectivity (only available on 370Z Touring models); the automatic transmission; and the Sport package, which includes a limited-slip differential, the downshift rev-matching feature, forged 19-inch wheels, front and rear spoilers, and Nissan Sport brakes. The 370Z will carry a starting price of $29,930, excluding destination charges.
